The class of twenty-seven is the largest ever graduated at the East St. Louis High School and the crowd which filled the sudirorium of the High School broke the record. Many could not get inside the High School building and were compelled to stand ourside on the grounds and listen to the nusie.

Peccorators and fiorists spent the entire day at work on the auditorium and left it a fairyland of potted plants and flowers. The stage was half hidden by big palms and St. Louis High School, were graduated inst ferms. An orchestra was stationed in front of the stage.

After an orchestral number Walter H. Mann, president of the class, delivered the introductory address. Arnold Tompkins, principal of the Chicago Normal School, delivered an address to the graduating class. He was followed by Al Keechler, who presented the diplomas. Mr. Keechler delivered an address to the graduates, telling them the battle they had had with their books from which they had emerged with flying colors, was the castest part of the battle of life upon which they were to enter. He wished them as much success in the battle of life as they had had in the battle for knowledge in the school.
